ALGAR AWARD FOR ILLUSTRATED ALBUM

That day, after the rain, the wind found a letter.
The postman, surprised and urged by the downpour,
had lost it without realizing.

The letter was in a puddle. The water had erased the names written on the envelope and it was impossible to know who was sending it or to whom it was addressed. That's why the wind decided to open it and read it.

It was a beautiful letter.

It simply said: «I LOVE YOU».

As it was so beautiful,
the wind thought that it would be a pity if it did not reach its addressee, whoever it was!

That's why the wind decided to give the letter a thrust so it could choose its own destiny.
And so the wind lifted it to the sky and dropped it from above.

The letter, gliding, reached the roof of Mr. Cat, slid down the chimney hole and came to rest on the head of the pussycat, who was sprawled out in his armchair at that time.

Mr. Cat was neat and clean. He lived in a funny and comfortable little house that would have enchanted any friend or visitor. But he was too surly: he had no friends, he could not bear visits and he did not open the door to anyone, not even the postman.

“It is better to be a lonely cat than to be in bad company!”, he muttered to himself when he felt alone, which was often.
