

THE DANGERS OF THE SUN

Sunstroke

CROCO DOC

bromera

The Dangers of the Sun

Sunstroke

MICHELE AMPOLLINI
ELISA CUADRADO GODIA
IVAN GARCÍA MORENO

bromera

Nico the chameleon is spending the day at the beach with his father and his two little sisters.

“Nico, will you play with us?” they ask.
“No, thanks!” he replies. “I want to sunbathe to get a tan.”

When Nico finally gets up, his skin is red, and his whole body hurts.

Plus he is so dizzy that he starts to vomit.

“Cool! The vomit changes colour!” his two sisters shout.

Daddy Chameleon leaves his daughters at home and takes Nico to the hospital. There, they explain to Croco Doc what happened.

“Nico, you have sunstroke,” says the doctor. “That happens when you stay in the sun too long.”

“Sometimes, the sun is good for us and makes us happier,” explains Croco Doc. “But if we sunbathe too long, we can get burnt!”

That’s why we need to find cool, shady places when it’s very sunny, and also wear a hat.”

