Tossing a peanut in the air...

Letting it spin
around five times...

Catching the peanut with his trunk...

...and delicately placing it in his mouth.

Roland had been performing the same circus act for one thousand, eight hundred and twenty-five days. But he wasn't going to do it one day longer.

He had a goal: to escape.

And he had a plan: to disappear into wizard Theodore's hat.

He got up early and took advantage of the time
while Theodore was brushing his teeth.
He had exactly two minutes.

He looked left and right, took the hat, and, upon peeking in it, he disappointingly discovered that there wasn't any space left for him. There were two rabbits, three pigeons and a llama in the hat. The escape was going to be more difficult than he had thought! He would have to come up with another plan. He had been tossing peanuts for one thousand, eight hundred and twenty-six days now, and he wasn't going to do it one day longer.

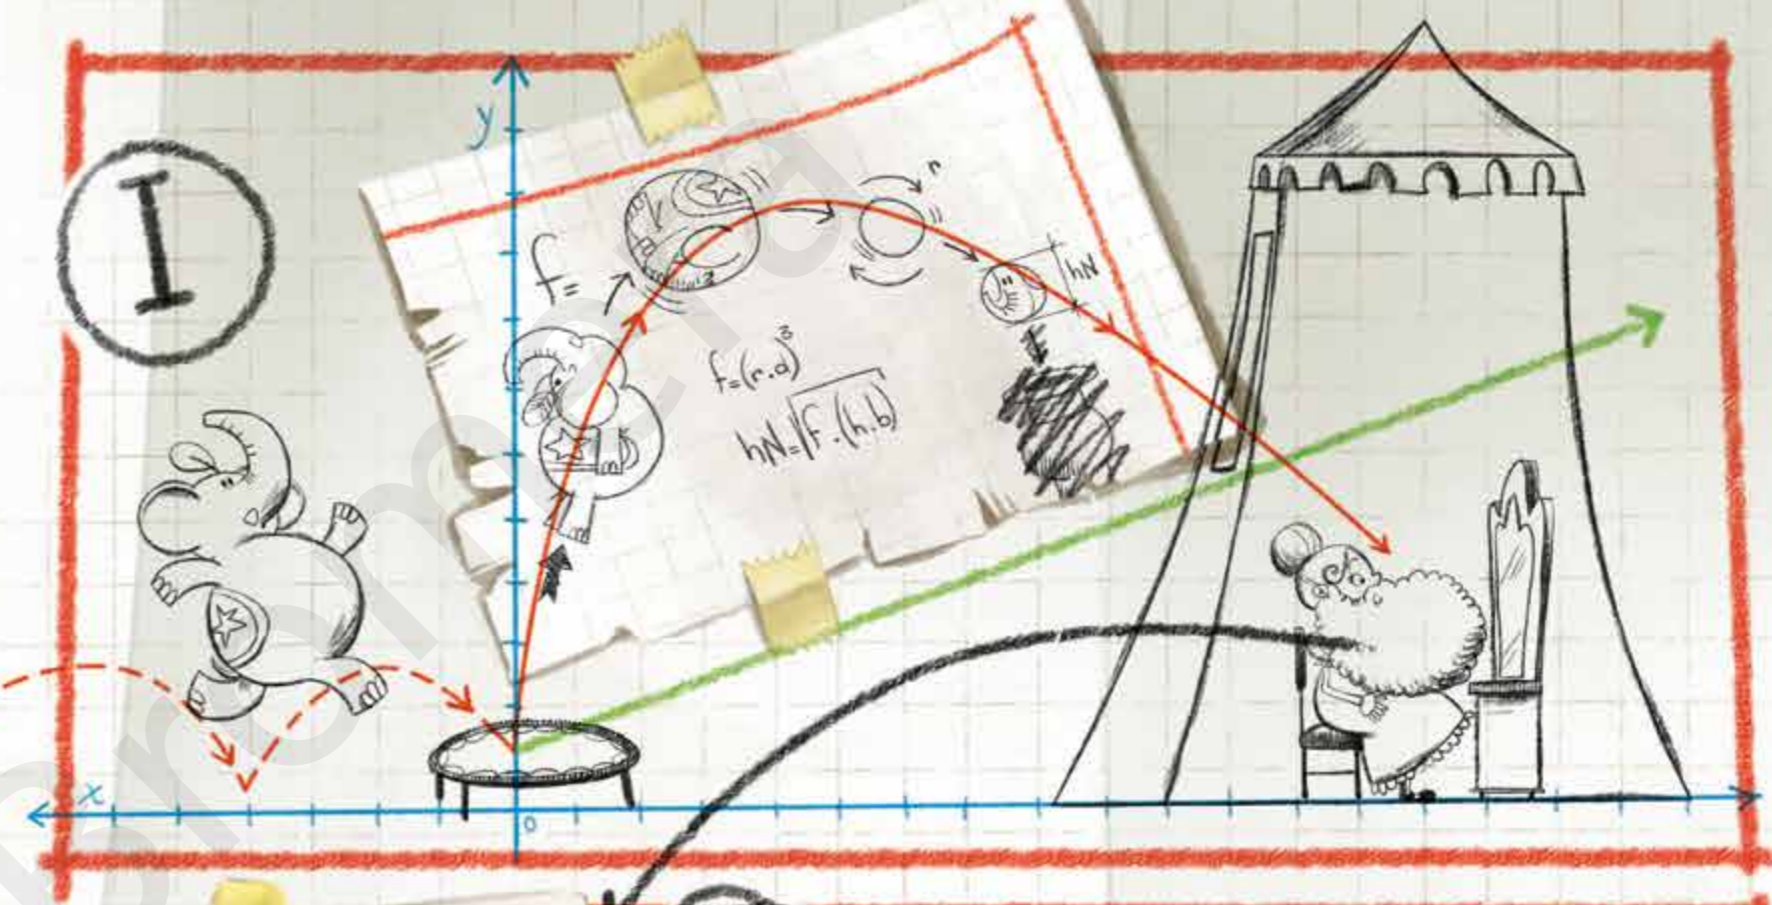

He thought of a Plan B immediately. He would escape by hiding in bearded Marlene's beard.
